ABOUT THE NATIONAL SEMINAR**

Sustainable Development: Socio-Economic Concerns

While the modern concept of sustainable development is derived mainly from the 1987 Brundtland Report, it is also rooted in earlier ideas about sustainable forest management and twentieth century environmental concerns. As the concept developed, it has shifted towards focus more on economic development, social development and environmental protection for future generations. It has been suggested that ‘the term 'sustainability' should be viewed as humanity’s target goal of human-ecosystem development, while “sustainable development” refers to the holistic approach and temporal processes that lead us to the end point of sustainability”. Modern economies are endangering to reconcile ambitious economic development and obligations of preserving natural resources and ecosystems, as the latter are usually seen as of conflicting nature. Instead of holding climatic change consequences and other sustainability measures against economic development, turning and leveraging them into market opportunities will be of greater good. The economic development strategies such as organic and principles and practices in this economy is called Multi-Scale Sustainable Development (MSSD).

- The backdrop of the paper will focus on the following subtopics:
  1. Constructing Modern Integrated Development Epitomes for Indian Agriculture
  2. Linkages of High-Tech Development Towards Agricultural Productivity
  3. Challenging Rural Scenario and Doubling Farmers’ Income: A Case
  4. Climate Change and Over Extraction of Water: Current and Future Challenges for Sustainable Development
  5. Agribusiness Opportunities and Changing Environment in India

- Article may be submitted via email and the authors are requested to direct all the queries pertaining to articles to the Chief Editor, Indian Journal of Economics and Development at seminarse0@gmail.com.
